

Strip Searches After a Release Order

Notice of Settlement of a Class Action

A settlement agreement has been reached between the Attorney General of Quebec and class action representative Roger Léonard, who challenged the legality of strip searches conducted after a release order.

Who is concerned by this agreement?

All persons who were strip searched:

- 1) between July 13, 2006 and July 1, 2011;
- 2) in one of the following detention centres : Bordeaux, Rivière-des-Prairies, Roberval, Saint-Jérôme or Quebec City (male sector);
- 3) following a court order that they were to be released, and
- 4) that all conditions for their release had been duly completed at the time of the strip search.

What does the agreement provide?

The settlement agreement provides for a payment of $4,144,950 by the Attorney General of Quebec. This amount covers the compensation of members, the fees of the representative's lawyers and all administrative and legal costs.

The agreement provides that each claimant will receive an indemnity of $1,000 for each eligible strip search undergone after a release order between July 13, 2006 and July 1, 2011, up to a maximum of $10,000 per person (maximum of one eligible search per day). Should there be insufficient funds to compensate each eligible claimant according to this scale, the agreement provides that the indemnities will be distributed based on the number of eligible claims.

This agreement does not include strip searches that occurred in a detention centre that were not subsequent to a release order.

Similarly, it does not cover strip searches conducted by police.

Finally, it does not apply to strip searches conducted in a detention centre when the conditions of release had not yet been met.

The agreement calls for the appointment of the Association des services de réhabilitation sociale du Québec as the claims' administrator.
